Sebastopol is not the port of construction for ships of war; they are built at Nicholaieu, on the river Bug, as Petersburg is the building place for Cronstadt. But here all repairs are done, and stores and materials of war in great quantity are kept in the naval arsenal.

In order to make sufficient space for the dock, the canal of which leads from the southern extremity of the little port, it was necessary to cut away a portion. of the mountain, and on the top of the great perpendicular wall thus made, now stands a massive pile of stone buildings, used as the sailors' winter barracks.

In case of an enemy penetrating the dockyard port, these barracks might be held as a formidable position by men armed with the Minie rifle; and it has been suggested that a couple of line of battle ships in the basin, with their broadsides to the port, and commanding it, would also form a battery of great power. Thus, in attack by sea alone on Sebastopol, eve y inch of ground would have to be contested.

A large filter has been erected, from which pipes are carried to the quay, into which a stream has been turned from the aqueduct, and when a ship requires a supply of water, she or the tank barges have only to go along side, a hose is attached to the pipe, put on board, and the process is accomplished with the greatest facility and expedition. No expense has been spared to render this naval arsenal perfect, and we doubt whether, in many respects, there is another in Europe so convenient, always supposing the works projected to have been carried out.

The streets of Sebastopol, as may be expected, teem with soldiers and sailors: indeed, no one unconnected with the services lives there; and all but Russians are discouraged, or forbidden to do so. The Jews were at one time ordered away from it entirely, but some few have been allowed to return. It was stated that no foreigners were permitted to rethain there more than 24 hours; but during a sojourn of 19 days we met with no interference, although we visited, and curiously examined, all parts of the town, and everything worth seeing in it Easier Times -The New York Railroad Advocate thinks that our financial troubles will soon have an end. It says:

The heaviest foreign payments of the country are new about made, $35,000,000 of gold having been sent abroad since January first. The barks have already contracted their loans, some $12,000,000 within a few weeks in this city. The cotton season is just opening in, promising a good cop and heavy returns. Roads, costing $60.000,000, will have been brought into full use, between January 1st, 1854, and January 15th, 1855. Over trading has been pretty effectually held up. The breadstuff and provision products of the last season are steadily coming in, and the effect of cutting off the Russian supply of grain from other European nations, will make the latter dependent on the United States. The shipments of coal from Schuylkill county are now going forward with great activity. Is there not, in all these circumstances, a promise of easier times?

MAIL ROBBER'S CONFESSION.-Byron, alias McDonald, who claimed to be a natural sen of Lord Byron, and who was recently convicted of throwing the cars off the track of the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railread, with the intention of robbing the mail, and who was for this offence sentenced to the Michigan penitentiary for life, has since his imprisonment, made disclosures and confessions that he and Napier, his companion in crime, reshed the mail on the Michigan Southern Railroad at the time of its collision with the Michigan Central Road, some fifteen months since, at the intersecting point of the two roads. He states that, in order to reach the mails, he crawled over the dead and wounded. Napier has escaped and fled to
